

CASE STUDY: UNILEVER

The Client: Unilever is one of the world's leading suppliers of fast moving consumer goods. They have three global divisions – Food, Healthcare and Personal Care and Sensei have been asked to work in all three, in all regions of the world.

The Work We Do: Many of the leaders in Unilever have chosen Sensei as a trusted business advisor, team coach and event facilitator over the last few years.

Our work with Unilever has mostly been helping leaders get the best from their people and injecting discipline and creativity into their team and leadership events and conferences. During our long relationship we have designed and deployed several 'Leadership Journeys' world-wide and these have helped their global category and regional leadership teams accelerate their journey towards high performance. We have also designed and delivered several tailored interventions that enhance the leadership skills of their high performing leaders. We have also designed and facilitated several War Game sessions for many of their categories and we continue to coach and work with many of the regional leaders and global brand teams, helping them with their challenges and achievements.

Unilever use Sensei as a trusted advisor and experienced facilitator and executive coach for any challenge where they need to get a diverse set of participants quickly focused on a strategic task and working well together. Our ability to design and flex our approach and our challenging and engaging facilitation style works really well in their highly diverse, high performing operating environment.
